A CROSS-EXAMINATION.

Mr. Harris (Dem.) Tenn., preceded to put Mr. Allen through a cross-examination after his usual emphatic fashion. He wanted to know if the Populists, with the full knowledge they held the balance of power, had not deliberately determined by their silence to allow the Republicans, who had three more votes than the Democrats, to take control, and if their silence did not, therefore, make them as much responsible as their votes. Mr. Allen said that the Populists realized that they held the balance of power.

"Was not the position of non-action and silence taken by the Populists," inquired Mr. Harris "quite as satisfactory as if they had pledged their votes to the resolution?"

ALWAYS SATISFIED.

"We are always satisfied with what the Senate does," responded Mr. Mitchell, smilingly.

"The senator from Tennessee understands that the rules give the plurality control of the committees," said Senator Hoar (Rep.) Mass.

"I am aware of the rule," replied Mr. Harris, gruffly.

"The senator is aware of everything."
"No, not everything." retorted Mr. Harris, resulty.

Mr. Palmer (Dem.) III., interrupted Mr. Hoar to ask whether the Republican party declined to be responsible for the committees, to which the latter replied that they would be responsible within all reasonable bounds.

Referring to the characterization by Mr. Harris, of the Populist party as a contingent of the Republican party, Mr. Hoar declared that the Populists would vote ten times with the Democrats where they would vote once with the Republicans.

Mr. Buller (Pop.) N. C., made his first

The decision was 10 almost and representation of the presentation of the lines adopted by the Federation of Labor, and while this reorganization compels great sacrifice on the part of the assembly and will bar from its future councils some of the oldest and best known trades unionists in the city, there was not a word said in opposition to the proposition.
